

Biker's UnAnonymous: It's a 1 Step Program

That's right; it's only a 1 step program. Step #1: Don't be an asshole. But, I know a lot of assholes so there is a need for further clarification of step #1. Now, being a member does not give you any rights except for the ability to more easily identify the assholes on 2 wheels and to be able to make fun of them without fear that they can point the finger back at you. But you must follow all of the rules. You don't get a t-shirt. You will also not get a patch or pin to add to the minutia of shit that you put on your vest or jacket (see rule #11). I do have a goal of making a PLB T-shirt. If this happens, Biker's UnAnonymous members can purchase the shirt at a discount (cost + shipping + a few bucks for my Chrome budget). It will still be less expensive than a Harley shirt. To be a member, you don't have to believe in a higher power. You also don't have to go around apologizing to anybody (except for rule #3) for your past actions. Membership is also free of charge. Just click on the Join Now link at the bottom and send me an email with "Membership" in the subject line and I will put your name and picture (if you send me one) on the future membership page.

I know what you're thinking; "PegLeg, can we get our own website just for Biker's UnAnonymous members? "Don't be an asshole". If you don't like it, come up with your own program.

Well, here are the ~~13~~ 14 steps of the 1 Step Program

1. For you who are also members of one of those Anonymous programs; I got nothing for you. I don't want to drive you to drink so I'll let you read on anyway. Speaking of drinking and riding; if you do ride while drunk then you're an asshole and you're out of the program.
2. The only time you should ever move your trailer is if you get caught sleeping with your cousin and you need to move to a different trailer park to reduce the temptation.
3. New-OK, so I know that you hardcore bikers are thinking, "PegLeg, you totally overlooked those assholes that pull a trailer with their bike. Are you going soft on us?" Hell no, I just have to say thank you to my great friend Al who pointed out the error in my ways. So, if you have a hitch on your bike (I said hitch, not bitch) then you can just trailer your ass out of the program right now.
4. Remember all those "Boob's for a Buck" girls you looked at while staring over the shoulder of the guy who paid the buck? You need to find all of those women and give them their damned dollar. How dare you objectify a woman.....without paying.
5. Quit bitching about the rain. You can't get more wet than wet.

6. Don't be ashamed of the duck butter! It's all natural.
7. Owning a "The Bitch Fell Off" T-shirt doesn't make you a Biker, it just makes you another asshole with a "The Bitch Fell Off" T-shirt. She's not even worth the effort if the bitch can't stay on the bike.
8. You don't have to ride a Harley in order to be a "Biker". I'm sure that there's a gay bike club somewhere that would greatly appreciate your membership. Your membership will have to be voted upon. And for you scooter riders? You're not a biker, you're an asshole. Don't wave to me, don't look toward me and get rid of that stupid helmet, unless it's prescribed by your therapist.
9. The Biker Salute: OK, I am a biker saluter from way back. Actually, the last thing that I did prior to my accident (except for yelling "OH SHIT") was to salute the guy I was riding with when he was turning a different direction. And no, that's not what caused the accident. That was due to me also turning my head to say goodbye. There is nothing wrong with saluting another biker but there are rules. You can't wave your hand back and forth like a 5th grade school girl. You look absolutely ridiculous. You also can't salute above your handlebars. It must be a simple gesture to the side or down. Otherwise you look like.....anybody, anybody (Ferris Bueller reference).....that's right- an asshole.
10. Biker Attire: Here we go. I know that I'm going to hurt a few feelings now but somebody has to set the rules and I don't see any of you stepping forward. We'll take this slowly so that you don't get confused.
 - a. Leathers: Leathers are great for when it's cold outside or if you are VERY safety conscious. If you are that safety conscious, then you shouldn't be on a bike to begin with. But for crying out loud; how can you wear leathers when it's 90 degrees outside. You look like an idiot on 2 wheels. The vest I can deal with. Lord knows you need a place to put all your.....(see rule #11). But seriously, stop with the leathers. Chaps are great for chicks that can pull it off but guys need to end this fantasy of how hot they must look in their chaps. And you guys on the rice burners look absolutely ridiculous. I would rather get in an accident and lose a leg than to be able to walk away from it due to my color-coordinated leather bodysuit. The EMS guys are laughing their asses off at you.
 - b. Tanks: There are not many of you that can pull this off. I can but I am also realistic enough to know that I won't be able to for very long. There is nothing worse than to be riding behind somebody who shouldn't be wearing a tank top. It kills the ride when you have to be concentrating the whole time to avoid the mass of body fluids that fly out of your arm flaps. And NO, they are not just the shirt version of shorts (see C below). Get yourself a nice short sleeved shirt. Sleeveless is also not acceptable for most of you.

c. Shorts: Unless you are missing a leg and need to be able to get to your prosthesis, you just look like an asshole on 2 wheels. I never rode wearing shorts prior to the accident and I am looking for somebody who can tailor more pairs of 1 ½ legged jeans for me. I only have 2 pair right now. You don't look cool in shorts and seeing your hairy bear-like legs is turning on nobody. I've actually seen you assholes wearing plaid shorts. It looks good on a scooter (see rule #8), but not on a bike.

d. Flip Flops: Need I say more?

11. Turn signals: You got them? Use them. Most of you need to keep both hands on your bike at all times.
12. Patches and Pins: Sure, where else can you put them except on your vest or jacket. I have an idea; put them in the top left drawer of your dresser. You look like an asshole with all that shit on your clothes. I have the following on my jacket, an eagle patch, US Flag patch, POW/MIA patch and bug guts. I will let a couple more slide but other than that will not be allowed. I own several of the HD collectible trading cards but you don't see me laminating them and sewing them onto my clothes. You can't even read the patches/pins on your own vest and I don't care where the hell you have been. Most of you are already at least 100 lbs overweight and your vest weighs more than you. Take care of the bike and it will take care of you. Collecting all that shit only means that you spend too much time at the vendors and too little time on your bike. Hell, you probably trailered the bike there anyway so put the patches and pin on your trailer. Oh, that's right; it's covered with too many Nascar stickers.
13. If you are not passing anybody, get the hell out of the left hand lane. When I'm not on my bike, I give all the room in the world to a biker on the road but if you are clogging up the left lane, even I want to roll over you. You look just as cool in the right lane. Sure, the road surface may be better in the left lane but that's what you have to deal with if you want to be a biker. Those are the types of assholes that cause road rage to be taken out upon bikers.
14. And finally, step #14. This is for you Albert. If you can't back up your own bike, drive a car. This isn't even a sexist remark because I saw a woman pulling her man's bike backward by tugging on the luggage rack. The funny part was that he was parked on an incline, facing the incline and he still needed help backing up. You'll know that you're an asshole if you see us shaking our heads at you.

That's it! It's not difficult to be a member. And if you have to work at it, then you are definitely an asshole.

Don't email me requesting an exception to one of the steps. All steps were voted upon and passed with a vote of 1 "For" and 0 "Against". If you are going to be a Bitch, you can't be in the program. Damn, that should be rule # ~~14~~-15 but I'm too tired to care.

Have a blessed day!
